WORSHIP WITH HOLY COMMUNION

AT ST PATRICK'S CATHOLIC CHURCH

I love to tell the story,
twill be my theme in glory
to tell the old, old story of Jesus and his love.

This is the chorus from one of my favourite hymns. It is not in the hymnal, but growing up Methodist, I remember singing it many times, especially at revivals and on special occasions. The tune was glorious and I remember always feeling excited and joyous when we sang it.

As I began to look forward to our observances of Holy Week and Easter, I remembered this hymn because it sums up what we shall be doing during that week which begins on Palm Sunday and ends on Easter Day – telling the story – the story of Jesus and his love. In our liturgies and through our readings we will re-enact the tumultuous events of Christ's last week of human life, beginning with the triumphant entry into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday and continuing with the Last Supper on Maundy Thursday; the arrest, trial and crucifixion of our Lord on Good Friday and climaxing with the joyous celebration of the resurrection of Christ at the Easter Vigil and on Easter Day. It is a story of highs and lows, great joy and heart-rending sadness, of life, death or ongoing life – but above all it is a story of love, God's love in action.

The call and challenge of Holy Week is to live again into this story so that it becomes our story – defining who and what we are. Throughout this Lenten season, we take time to focus on our stories through our weekday programs, sermons and other opportunities. Now I invite and urge you to live out this final story – the one which defines us above all other stories – as the recipients of God's greatest gift of love, his Son.

The Son of Man came to look for and to save people who are lost And here is our problem. Our trouble today is that people generally do not feel like they need saving. (The exception being American school children, who acutely feel the need to be saved from guns.) The mind-set of the crowds when Jesus rode into Jerusalem was far from our own. The populous desired freedom from the yoke of Roman rule and the burden of Roman taxes. They wanted to be saved. Not only that, but the religious milieu of the day made them very aware of the need to be released and saved from the burden of their sins. This was the whole basis of the sacrificial system, and would have been at the forefront of their minds during the Passover Feast. Salvation in Jesus day was much to be desired as both an internal and external reality. Unfortunately, Christians on our own day have often spoken of salvation as though it was purely an individual thing and related to a future reality rather than a present one. At the same time the need for salvation is not something that would usually enter the minds of those unfamiliar with Christian jargon. But we do need salvation! Salvation is a call into relationship with God and into relationship with one another. Jesus came to bring this salvation. What we are saved from is isolation. This is something for which every heart yearns

The week ahead involves for us the memory of the injustice of Jesus' arrest and trial, and his suffering on the cross. But today, Palm Sunday, is a day to celebrate. The Christian faith should not result in sour faces. There is a time to rejoice and celebrate, and it is today!

Our celebration is an acknowledgement that ultimately God is in control. God is good and wants the best for us. Sometimes we have to look beyond our immediate circumstances to shout out our praise. It becomes a shout of faith. "Hallelujah! Hooray! The King has come!"

Today let us celebrate!
